

Military medals

Do you have proud veterans of the Armed Forces in the family?

Wouldn't they be thrilled to receive a gift of a beautiful three-dimensional shadow box or custom frame displaying their military medals, insignias, and decorations; photos; certificates; personal memorabilia; and treasures?

What finer way to honor the sacrifice and service of loved ones who put on the uniform and gave their all for their country and for freedom? Military medals are meant to be proudly displayed, not hidden away in a drawer!

Framing military medals and awards is a perfect way to preserve and protect them and create a very precious gift and legacy – an heirloom of treasured memories to share with your family and generations to come.

It's important to take those precious medals and decorations to a professional picture framer who will play an important role in their preservation through the use of proper protective materials. The custom frame or shadowbox can even be designed so that, if desired, medals can be removed and worn, and then replaced in the frame.

A qualified professional framer will play an important role in the preservation of your art and memorabilia through the use of proper protective materials. Care should be taken in selecting a professional framer who is knowledgeable in preservation framing methods.

The Professional Picture Framers Association™ (PPFA®), the international trade association for the art and framing industry, works to elevate professional standards in the industry by providing advanced educational programs and encouraging the continued professional development of custom picture framers.

Be sure to look for the purple and white PPFA member decal on the shop door or window!
